peacetime and formed in the Leningrad military district during mobilisation. This period is determined by the fact that counting from the first day of mobilisation loviet industry is scheduled to switch over to normal wartime output in curee months; thereafter it can start normal deliveries to front and army depots.

- 7. "The plans for all military deliveries in industry during a war are scheduled by quarters, three months at a time.
- 8. "The mobilization stores of the units existing in peacetime, which are meant for the use in a state of emergency, are called the 'intact (neprikosnovennye) stores of the (X) unit'. In the Leningrad military district these intact stores have already been distributed to all units. The units are responsible for their safekeeping. The units may on no account use up these supplies. They must always be fully available for distribution."
